

A PERSONAL NOTE: My NETWORK LOG which I wrote last year was reprinted and is being sold for a limited time at the special convention price of $15 including postage and all three supplements. This would be a nice Christmas present...The log on SHOWS IN CIRCULATION is also on sale for its convention price of $18 which includes 5 supplements. See the enclosed flyer. The flyer lists the special prices and gives information on all my logs...PAUL WEISS, 1217 So. Potomac St., Baltimore, MD 21224 recently had surgery and would like to hear from his friends. Paul is a regular attendee of our conventions....Supplement 3 to my Network Log is available for a SASE. Included are complete revisions to Bing Crosby, Romance, Challenge of the Yukon, Silver Theatre, Fred Allen, Philip Morris Playhouse and others....Supplement 16 to my Collectors List (#149 - 159) is available for a SASE.

FRED ALLEN LOG: A complete revision to my Fred Allen Log is available for $6.50 including postage. It is virtually complete (10/23/32 - 6/26/49). Most programs are identified by guests.

I hope everyone had a happy Thanksgiving and will have a healthy, happy holiday and New Year. I turned a very quiet 54 on November 25th.

CONVENTION '88: All details about the convention will be found on page 6...Many thanks to all the people who supported the Friends of Old-time Radio Convention by buying raffle tickets, purchasing shirts, pins and pictures and buying ads. The ads were purchased by James Albert, The Golden Radio Buffs, Jan Miner, Don Aston, The Old-time Radio Club of Buffalo and myself. Special thanks go to the many dealers and guests who donated prizes for the raffle. Carlton E. Morse donated 3 autographed books...Bob Burnham will have audio tapes and Don Ramlow will have video tapes of the convention. Their addresses are in the convention program. I will announce details when I get them...ED CARR, 216 Shaner St., Boyertown, PA 19512 sold some tapes at the convention which had the wrong programs on one of the tracks. Write to him and he will rectify it.

CONVENTION '89: The dates are October 19-21 at the Holiday Inn North, Newark. It will start again on Thursday around 12 noon. Friday will now be a full day with dealers tables running from 9 to 6. The Saturday hours for dealers will still be 9 to 3. Possible re-creations will include "The March of Time," and "Ellery Queen." Norman Corwin was approached to be one of our guests and seemed receptive. Sanford Marshall, who was a producer and director at Mutual, has offered to do a talk. Doris Milberg is thinking of doing a panel on War News with newscasters as guests. Gary Yoggy is thinking of doing a related workshop of radio during the war years emphasizing its patriotic and propagandistic role...All suggestions will be considered. Please send them to me. Also, if you wish to help, run a workshop, etc., please let me know. Our first committee meeting will be in January or February in Stamford, Ct.

SPERDVAC CONVENTION: Karen, her two children and I visited California for the first time over the weekend of November 12th. I attended the SPERDVAC Convention on Nov. 11th and 12th while Karen, Evan and Elisa did a lot of sightseeing in Los Angeles. A detailed report of the convention will be in SPERDVAC'S monthly magazine. Larry Gassman, the chairman, together with help from many people including his brother, John, Bobb Lynes, Barbara Watkins, Cathie Passarelli, Jerry Williams and Don Haefele put together an excellent program.

Featured were the re-creations of "Gunsmoke" and Norman Corwin's "An Undecided Molecule." The Gunsmoke cast included Michael Rye in the lead, Parley Baer, Lillian Buyeff, Herb Ellis, Ray Erlenborn, Tyler McVey and Vic Perrin. George Walsh was the announcer and William Froug was the director. An Undecided Molecule was directed by Norman Corwin and had in its cast: Jerry Hausner, Lou Krugman, Fletcher Markle, Janet Waldo and Ray Erlenborn. The engineer was Marty Halperin.

Other celebrities and guests I had the pleasure of talking with were: Conrad Binyon, Richard Wilson, Carlton E. Morse, Frank Thomas, Robert Winckler, Jean Gillespie, Leonard Maltin, George Balzer, Gale Storm, Paul Masterson, Bill Zuckert, Gladys Holland, Willard Waterman, John Archer, Jay Stewart, Veola Vonn, Barbara Fuller, Jack Kelk and Frank Bresee. At the Saturday night banquet I was presented an award for my work with the Friends of Old-time Radio Convention. It was very much appreciated.

Their convention (this is their 5th annual) is very effectively organized and run utilizing the help and expertise of many of its members.

CONVENTION HIGHLIGHTS

The Friends of Old-time Radio held its 13th Annual Convention from October 20th - 22nd, 1988 at the Holiday Inn - North, Newark, New Jersey. Celebrities present who received awards were: Bob Dryden, Peter Fernandez, Jeanne Harrison, Bob Hastings, Hildegard, Jackie Kelk, Robert E. Lee, Sanford Marshall, Jan Miner, Carlton E. Morse, Larry Robinson, Joan Shea and Richard Wilson. Other celebrities present were Lee Allman, Arthur Anderson, Barney Beck, Jackson Beck, Court Benson, Ray Erlenborn, Ed Herlihy, Don Hughes, Raymond Edward Johnson, Rita Lloyd, Ann Loring, Peg Lynch, Gilbert Mack, Arnold Moss, Dick Osgood, Alice Reinheart, Stella Reynolds, Adele Ronson, Ken Ross, Terry Ross, Bob Steel, Ezra Stone, Arthur Tracy, Sybil Trent, Dwight Weist, Florence Williams and Miriam Wolfe. The guest socialized with fans, participated in panels and workshops and re-created 5 radio shows.

The convention began on Thursday at 5:30 with cocktails followed by dinner. The 5 guests present (Carlton E. Morse, Ray Erlenborn, Dick Osgood, Terry Ross and Richard Wilson) talked informally to the fans. Jay Hickerson entertained with trivia and a sing-a-long for the rest of the evening.

Friday began at 10:00 with the opening of the dealers room. 46 dealers were present during Friday and Saturday. 210 people attended dinner with another 71 in the afternoon. Workshops and panels included: Computers (Bob Burnham), Lending Libraries (Tom Monroe), Female Detectives (Jack French), Broadcasting OTR and copyrights (Bill Nadel, Larry and John Gassman, Gordon Kelley, others), Gateway to Hollywood (panel) followed by auditions, Radio in England (Barry Hill), Music of the Lone Ranger (Reg Jones). The Dave Warren Players presented The Maltese Falcon. After dinner Arnold Moss was featured in a re-creation of Cabin B-13. The Dave Warren Players presented two episodes of Allen's Alley. During the dinners, the fans had a chance to visit the special guests for conversation and autographs.

On Saturday the dealers room opened at 9:00 and the workshops and panels started including: Gunsmoke (Don Aston), Meet Carlton E. Morse (Larry and John Gassman) and a re-creation of Gateway to Hollywood. The winners were Leslie Feagan (Wendell Preston) and Suzanne Barabas (Judy Corbett). The script used was an episode of One Man's Family. Barney Beck gave a excellent sound effects demonstration. Richard Wilson headed a panel discussing War of the Worlds. Raymond Edward Johnson gave a stirring reading of The Telltale Heart. Jackson Beck led a panel and re-creation of Superman. Arthur Anderson directed an episode of Let's Pretend with all members of the original cast.

Saturdays's events culminated with cocktails and buffet dinner for 344 people with another 164 coming for the day. After dinner Robin Fields and Bill Daugherty, professional entertainers from New York, entertained us with their arrangements of radio shows and commercials with music and comedy. They then gave a moving performance of Gershwin's, Rhapsody in Blue, with original words by Robin Fields. Arthur Tracy sang Pennies from Heaven. Gilbert Mack entertained us with a yodeling song. Ezra Stone and Gil Mack gave us a very funny, mostly ad libbed excerpt of the Aldrich Family in honor of its 50th year. Bob Dryden and Alice Reinheart led an all star cast in an episode of I Love a Mystery. During all of this, there were various interruptions as an updated version of War of the Worlds was performed, both on and off stage.

The awards were then given out including 2 Allen Rockford Awards to Barbara Watkins and Barry Hill for their outstanding efforts in keeping radio alive. Jackson Beck gave some closing remarks. Karen and Jay then officially closed the convention with their version of Thanks for the Memory, I'll Be Seeing You (dedicated to Hildegard) and God Bless America in honor of the 50th anniversary of its first performance on radio by Kate Smith.

I want to again thank all the guests who were very gracious in granting interviews and giving of their time to be with us.

"We've Got to Have Carfare!"

Working Conditions in Early Radio Were Strictly . . . "A Joke, Son!"

by Arthur Anderson

One day in 1935, a twenty-five-year-old actor named Kenny Delmar got off the BMT at Times Square and strode uptown. Besides a piece of paper with the name of a man to see scribbled on it, he also carried several worries, some artistic, some financial—though his appearance contradicted this. His clothes would have been described as casual, his facial expression placid, but his hair was the most carefree thing about him, falling down behind as it did in long waves that looked like the churning wake of an ancient Greek sailing ship. Indeed, there was more than a little Greek in Kenny—which you might expect of someone who had a grandfather by the name of Zacharias Felixathees Thikou Es-tradiathbis.

Kenny was born in Boston in 1910, inheriting his performing talent from a mother who, during her own childhood in England, was half of a singing and dancing act, the Delmar Sisters. Later she acted in this country with such celebrated stars as Lenore Ulric, David Belasco and George M. Cohan—and when she produced children's talent shows in Boston and on tour, her son was of course included. This was what launched Kenny as a child actor, and started him working in New York. There were Broadway plays, there were early motion pictures (he had played Joseph Schildkraut as a child in the classic "Orphans of the Storm"), and . . . there was the Depression.

The Great Slump was what put Kenny, involuntarily, in the olive importing business with his stepfather in downtown Manhattan, and brought him that day in 1935 to radio station WHN ("Ten fifty on your dial—atop Loew's State Theatre Building."), where he had heard there was work for actors.

This proved to be an understatement.

Kenny Delmar as Senator Claghorn.

ment. The station had a heavy schedule of live programming in its two small studios. Kenny was taken on immediately. There was only one major disadvantage to the job—there was no money connected with it. However, he now found himself part of a very busy radio stock company, every member of which worked for the same magnificent wages mentioned above. The other talented and hard-working actors included:

Don McLaughlin, who as a young boy from the University of Iowa and the Chautauqua circuit, decided to find out what New York offered. One thing it offered was a wife (he married a newspaper woman), another was free work on WHN. He went on to become a busy performer in other better-paying acting jobs, and at this writing has completed his tenth year as Chris Hughes on the television serial "As the World Turns."

Louis Krugman, now a very active player in Hollywood theatrical and television motion pictures.

Louise Vetter, widow of the veteran radio actor Frank Readick, and now married to a television executive.

Gail Henshaw, who died some time ago.

Betty Worth, now out of show business and living in Bucks County, Pennsylvania, married to an executive of the Burpee Seed Company.

Wendell Holmes, who later became a busy and successful radio and stage actor, and died in the 1950's.

Gilbert Mack, who as Mack Gilbert had a hillbilly singing and comedy act on the "WHN Barn Dance." The stock company became his training ground for the many vocal and visual characterizations which he has done over thirty years on radio, commercials, children's records and film sound tracks.

Amy Sydell, who claimed she could talk faster and say more words per minute than anyone, and who still does so on commercial sound tracks and in other media.

As for Kenny Delmar, the stock company started his rise toward becoming one of radio's busiest actors, announcers and comedians. He became best known for his Senator Claghorn character on the Fred

Allen Show. He has since been starred in a Hollywood film ("It's A Joke, Son!"), a Broadway revue ("Texas Lil' Darlin'"), the banquet circuit (as the Senator), and in many television cartoon and commercial voice-overs. He will soon be getting back to his first love, radio, in a series of comedy vignettes on NBC's "Monitor."

With this nucleus of nine versatile performers, the station was able to put on a wide variety of programs which included comedies, dramas, documentaries, ghost stories, news programs and commentaries. There was even Shakespeare, directed by Maurice Barrett, who left show business in his eighties to become a rabbi.

The actors' day started at nine A.M. or earlier. Rehearsals were short, but the performers would appear in five or six shows a day, doubling in as many roles as possible without the duplication being too noticeable. An actor might also be called upon to double in sound effects. Gilbert Mack remembers doing Santa Claus, his reindeer's hooves and his sleigh bells, all at one time, with a goose-neck mike hung over the sound effects table.

The WHN Guild, as it was informally called, was quite democratic, not only in salaries but in acting assignments, which were given out weekly on typewritten sheets. Today's leading man might be tomorrow's crowd ad-lib. The morning's first assignment was the Ida Bailey Allen cooking show. This included dramatizations . . . also early rehearsal calls. There was a weekly documentary called "Flame Fighters," dramatizing the most famous fires of history. Another program, five times a week, was "The Seven O'Clock Edition." This predated the radio "March of Time" in that it was the first in New York to dramatize the day's news events, with members of the WHN Guild impersonating Franklin D. Roosevelt, Charles Lindbergh, Mahatma Gandhi and other news makers of the day, reading from scripts which had often been finished when the program was already on the air.

The actors' most glamorous assignment was "The MGM Movie Club," probably because it paid a fee—five dollars. This featured Radie Harris interviewing a real live MGM star, plus the live portrayal of a scene from his current picture, which the radio cast had just witnessed in a projection room on the building's rooftop next door to the studio, so as to perfect impersonations of the film actors' voices.

The WHN Guild was a close-knit social group. After they had done their five or six shows, the actors would gather at night in Child's, at Forty-sixth Street and Seventh Avenue, or at the Silver Dollar Bar, where the conversation would always include the exchange of casting tips on shows that paid salaries. Occasionally these get-togethers would be livened by impromptu performances, such as when Kenny Delmar would go into his Greek waiter bit, or his Texan bit, and in five minutes turn a quiet group of after-theatre diners into a captive audience roaring with laughter. After a long day of free work, more of the same after hours!

Obviously, the WHN operation was a labor of love for the performers. For the younger ones especially, it was an exciting chance to gain experience, to work, to be heard. But everyone had to eat. This was accomplished in various ways, depending upon the individual. Some of the women were supported by husbands . . . some husbands were supported by their wives, and the performers did get free-lance acting jobs elsewhere, in the theatre and occasionally on the network stations—WJZ, WEA (both then NBC stations), WABC (then CBS) and WOR (then Mutual). But it gradually dawned on them that it was only right they should be paid for rehearsing and performing some sixty hours a week. "At least," said one, "we've got to have carfare!"

And so in 1936 (no one seems to remember the date, or even the month), another, more serious after-work kaffeeklatsch was held in a nearby coffee shop. Louis Krugman, Kenny Delmar and a few others formulated some basic demands to be presented to the WHN management, the most important of which was . . . a salary.

The actors asked for twenty-five dollars a week. Negotiations were much shorter and simpler than those held nowadays. After some haggling, the station, whether out of a guilty conscience or a delayed sense of social responsibility, agreed to pay —twenty.

The issue had been won without a strike. The WHN Guild had carried the day, and its members began taking home salaries which amounted to roughly thirty-three cents an hour (before deductions).

The hard-won gains of collective bargaining began to pall, however, when more became known of better fees to be had elsewhere. Even on WHN itself, an outside show had been brought in by Hi Brown, working for Blackett-Sample-Hummert, "Joyce Jordan, Girl Intern." On this, the actors were paid twelve dollars for just one fifteen-minute

It was shortly after this, August of 1937 to be exact, network radio having become big business, that a national union of radio performers was chartered, the American Federation of Radio Artists, which is now our own union, AFTRA, and whose present basic contract with WHN, incidentally, calls for quite a few dollars more than the amount won by the hard-working crew of the WHN Guild.

It was on a cold day in 1936 that Kenny Delmar and Don McLaughlin, two of the WHN stock company's currently most successful alumni, were trudging up Sixth Avenue, talking with slightly raised voices, so as to be heard over the rumble of the elevated trains. "I'm not going on like this forever," said McLaughlin. "Before I'm through, I'll be earning seventy-five dollars a week!" "I won't be satisfied with that," said Delmar. "I'm going to make a hundred!" Through some haggling, and a lot of talent, all of them have done much better than that.

Room for radio. Radio took center stage at the Museum of Broadcasting during an Oct. 27 seminar, Orson Welles On the Air: The Radio Years, promoted as the museum's first radio exhibition. The panel, which focused on innovative radio techniques exercised by Welles, included Geraldine Fitzgerald and Arlene Francis, who both worked with Welles on stage and the radio; War of the Worlds radio scriptwriter Howard Koch; former Mercury Theatre stage manager and production assistant to Welles, Richard Wilson, and film critic Andrew Sarris, who moderated the panel. The seminar coincided with the unveiling of the museum's first radio exhibition room (pictured above). Designer Santo Loquasto styled the room after his set design for Woody Allen's nostalgic Radio Days, complete with furnishings used in the film. Major support for the museum's radio department has been provided by Interep Chairman Ralph Guild and Westwood One Chief Executive Officer Norm Pattiz.
